Elements and principles of design

The elements of designing a flower arrangement that must be included are line, texture, shape or form, size and color. All of these elements must come together in a way that pleases the viewer. To make it please the viewer you must follow certain design principals. These principals are proportion, balance, harmony, contrast and unity. Proportion or size of the flower arrangement must not overpower the container. Large arrangements must be up in larger pots and smaller arrangements should be placed in smaller sized pots. Balance is having equal amount of flowers on either side of the pot. In a pot you do not want
